

FATIMA KHADIJAH'S

GUIDE TO FOOLERY UNDER FASCISM

rule #1:
question anything
that demands your
obedience without
your humanity

step b:
study the tricksters:
Anansi, Loki, Coyote, Hermes
they all disrupted power structures

foolery is not stupidity
it's strategic irreverence
in rigid systems

practice beginner's mind propaganda depends on you thinking you've seen this before

break a rule
today
a small one
or, fuck it, a
big one...

just to
remember
you can say the quiet part out loud...

but but make it slippery enough to pass through surveillance

the court jester stayed alive
by telling the truth sideways:
learn this skill

if you feel
embarrassed
you are
stepping
outside conditioning

foolery
dissolves ego
and ego is easily
recruited by
authority

A woman stands in a dark, cave-like environment with jagged rock formations. She is wearing a red, off-the-shoulder, floor-length dress with a black belt. On her head is a crown or tiara with large red and blue feathers. She holds a caduceus (a staff with two snakes entwined and wings at the top) in her right hand. She is wearing black boots with red laces. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting her against the dark background.

learn from Hermes:
steal something intangible
like a narrative back from power

learn from Coyote:
mistakes are also creations mistakes are also resistance

learn from Loki:
transformation
disrupts control

A whimsical illustration in a painterly style. In the lower-left foreground, a young girl with long, wavy blonde hair is seen from behind, looking upwards. She wears a blue dress with a yellow belt and a yellow sash. Her hands are clasped in front of her. In the upper-middle section, a large, gnarled tree branch extends across the frame. A black cat with a white patch on its back is perched on this branch, looking down at the girl with a wide, toothy grin. The background is a dense, dark forest with tall, thin trees and a soft, hazy light filtering through the canopy. The overall mood is mysterious and playful.

play is not a distraction it is how humans remain ungovernable

laugh when things fall apart laughter is difficult to police

refuse the performance
of perfection

perfection is a tool of
control

A surrealist illustration on a textured, yellowish-orange background. A central figure with a fox-like head and a human torso stands prominently. The figure wears a red and white striped garment and holds a black banner aloft with the word 'FORWARD' in red capital letters. In its right hand, it holds a black top hat. The figure's left arm is extended towards a crowd of people in the foreground. The crowd consists of several individuals, some with animal-like features, looking up at the central figure. The overall style is painterly and expressive, with a color palette dominated by yellows, oranges, and reds.

talk to the world
like it's listening
because
relationship
breaks isolation

A surrealist illustration featuring a man with a human face and a crown, whose body is that of a large, multi-legged spider. He is holding a globe of the Earth in his front legs. The background consists of a large, gnarled tree trunk and a dark, swirling, smoke-like or liquid-like texture. The overall color palette is dominated by dark blues, greys, and blacks, with highlights in white and light blue.

foolery is
resistance
systems struggle
to dominate
what they cannot
predict

become a little unknowable
legibility is often
demanded by power

final lesson:

they want obedience
you were made for aliveness, play, and each other